

The veterinarian and staff at Trusty Vet stand behind annual vaccinations protocols 100%. Vaccines have allowed pets and humans alike to live longer and healthier lives. Today's vaccines have undergone elaborate medical research to ensure that they are safe to administer and effective in preventing fatal diseases.

Our goal is to make the decision on which vaccines to give to each pet easy for our clients. We will break your pet's exposure risk to infectious diseases down into two categories. There will be pets that have regular exposure to possible infectious diseases including those that attend boarding or grooming facilities and also spend a lot of time outside in the backyard or on trails or greenways. The group of pets in the other category, typically spend the majority of their life inside of the home with limited exposure risk to infectious diseases. The veterinarian and technical staff will ask a few questions at your pet's initial vaccination visit to determine which category your dog or cat would belong to and will offer the appropriate vaccination package.
